Short description

Even today, school continues to be one of the main experiential devices that contribute significantly to the education of boys and girls as they go through adolescence. This course aims to promote skills in reading and processing the needs and characteristics that mark the new forms of experience that adolescents bring with them and that teachers encounter on a daily basis in the school context.

In light of the many signs of adolescent distress that pervade the school environment but are rooted in the social and educational crisis of our time, the course aims to provide the theoretical and practical tools needed to interpret the effects of the socio-cultural phenomena affecting today's adolescents.
The course will seek to offer tools for pedagogical understanding of the emotional/affective/physical implications that arise in the school environment and significantly influence interpersonal dynamics in adolescence.
