Teaching methods

The teaching is divided into classroom lectures, analysis, and discussions based on concrete cases, even judicial, real or plausible.

Should the Covid-19 emergency persist during the reference semester, the lessons will take place partially in attendance and partially videotaped.

Any changes relating to the methods of the lessons will be published on the e-learning portal.

Assessment methods

The exam will be oral.

The oral exam will be focused on 3 topics (one about private law in general and two about family law), related to the course program, with reference to the recommended texts and classroom lectures.

For attending students only (75% of lessons), one of the two family law topics may be indicated to their choice.

This method will not be adopted if the lessons have not taken place in the presence of the students.

It will be evaluated the learning of fundamental notions of common private law and the ability to express them with appropriate language; the understanding which regards the institutions of family and child law, also in their legislative and judicial evolution; the acquisition of adequate knowledge to guide the social worker within the protection's institutions conceived for the vulnerable individuals.
