COURSE SYLLABUS

Social and Intercultural Pedagogy

2021-2-E1901R127

Course title

PEDAGOGIA SOCIALE E INTERCULTURALE

prof. Sergio Tramma

Topics and course structure

The tuition course aims to analyse social education from a pedagogical perspective, paying particular attention to informal, not intentional and extra-institutional experiences. Nowadays, the privileged research field regards the connections between education and transformations of contemporaneity, with a specific interest in changes in individual and collective subjects' life courses, on increasing complexity and problematical aspects of educational environments, besides on the consequent enlargement of professional educator's field of intervention. Moreover, the course aims to offer a pedagogical and social interpretation of intercultural and multicultural contemporary issues, with special reference to current and past migration processes.

"Education in the suburbs, education of the suburbs"

In the monographic part, the course will focus on the educational implications that economic and social transformations have in the suburbs and on the subjects living there, with particular attention to the rise and/or the re-proposition of cultures and identity praxis.

Objectives

The educational intent consists of stimulating the acquisition of cognitive tools and abilities to operate analysis and interventions in complex territorial contests characterized by different forms of potential and/or actual social deprivation, with the main regard in suburbs.

Methodologies

In the Covid-19 emergency period, the lessons will be videotaped in asynchronous/synchronous. More details about didactical methods or any changes will be communicated.
