COURSE SYLLABUS

International Criminal Procedure

2122-4-A5810089

Learning objectives

Help the student to develop a "negative capability ' (intended as the ability to work under uncertainties) and the ability to contextualize (which means to correctly order judicial measures and individual rights); these two tecniques are indispensable to all legal operators.

Sustainable Development Goals: n. 11 (sustainable cities and communities), n. 16 (peace, justice and strong institutions)

Contents

A different justice is possibile. It is the international justice, which operates whenever it’s very likely the perpetrators of the most serious crimes (as genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity) are going to escape the criminal process in their own countries. The International Criminal Court has jurisdiction in these cases. This course aims to analyze the functioning of the International Criminal Court – that was created in 1998, but that has not been recognised by all the Countries yet – looking at the future of this institution, but without forgetting the experience of the ‘short twentieth century’(and the Nuremberg Court in particular).
