COURSE SYLLABUS

European Union Common and Security Defence Policy

2223-4-A5810219

Learning objectives

The course aims to consolidate the knowledge of the organisational and institutional structure of the European Union and to deepen knowledge of the role and practice of the Union in the field of crisis management and peace and security maintenance

Contents

The course deals with the policies of the European Union in the areas of security, defence and crisis management. Excluded for almost fifty years from the competences of the European Union, the Common Security and Defence Policy (CSDP) has recently emerged as an important aspect of the Union's external relations. The Treaty on European Union, as amended in Lisbon in 2007, has provided this Policy with new operational tools and new objectives, to allow the Union to play a role as a global actor in the fight against threats to international security. In a relatively short space of time, the European Union has engaged in an increasing number of military and civilian missions in various areas of the world, aimed at stabilising areas and countries in danger. It is now facing the new challenges linked to the deterioration of security on the European continent.

The course aims to consider both the general legal issues raised by the new role of the European Union as a global security actor, and the specific legal and operational issues related to military and civilian peacekeeping missions carried out under the aegis of the Union. The following aspects will be specifically considered: the basic characteristics of the European Union's external relations regime, with particular regard to the CFSP; the institutional aspects of the CSDP and its integration into the legal order of the European Union; the CSDP missions undertaken by the European Union, their classification, structure and functions; the operational solutions developed at Union level European to address the legal issues raised by these missions (e.g. the rules of engagement of the missions, the protection of human rights in the territories affected by the presence of the missions, the distribution of responsibilities between the European Union and its Member States for the activities carried out by the missions); the applicability of international humanitarian law to CSDP missions; The European Union's relations with the United Nations and the role of the Union as a regional organisation within the meaning of Chapter VIII of the UN Charter; the Union's reaction to recent challenges to peace and security in Europe and the EU-NATO relationship. In addition, recent events have shown the close correlation between the EU's external and internal security. The course will therefore also address the relationship between CSDP and the Area of Freedom, Security and Justice (AFSJ) in relevant areas such as the fight against terrorism or illegal migration, with a particular focus on the role of the European Public Prosecutor's Office (EPPO) and recent initiatives to extend the competences of the EPPO to cross-border terrorist crimes.

Detailed program

The course will address, in particular, the following issues: 1) The origins and development of European policy cooperation on security and defence from the EDC to the CSDP; 2) The legal and institutional structure in place after the Treaty of Lisbon with regard to the Common Foreign and Security Policy (CFSP) of the European Union and the specific characteristics of this policy; 3) The institutions, actors and protagonists of the CFSP; 4) THE instruments of the CFSP; 5) The limited role of judicial review of the CFSP and the boundaries between it and other EU policies; 6) The Common Security and Defence Policy (CSDP) as an integral part of the CFSP; 7) Typology of missions established under the CSDP, between military operations and civilian missions; 8) Steps and procedures for the planning, financing and creation of CSDP missions; (9) The legal basis and content of CSDP agreements; 10) Relations between the EU and other international organisations, in particular the UN and NATO; 11) The new challenges related to security in Europe: the European Strategic Compass and the European Peace Facility; 12) The relationship between external and internal security: CSDP/AFSJ cooperation; 13) The role of the European Public Prosecutor's Office (EPPO).

Prerequisites

Prior knowledge of the institutional aspects of European Union law is recommended

Teaching methods

The course will be taught in English and developed through seminars, discussion prompts, critical examination of required or recommended readings and materials circulated to students attending the class; students will be required to prepare and present selected cases
