COURSE SYLLABUS

Before Meeting The Assisted Person: What Am I? An Uncomfortable and Unavoid

2324-2-I0201D151

Aims

seminar with an anthropological background, held by Don Ambrogio Pisoni, Professor of Theology and Pastoral Assistant at the Milan branch of the Catholic University. The seminars will try to identify a path which, starting from what ontologically constitutes the human person, passes through the fundamental questions at the origin of man's experience in the world.
In the training of those who, with their future profession, will deal with the health and illness of the person, the theme of the human appears central.

Contents

The reasonableness of the data: I am made by another.
The irreducibility of the desire for totality
Freedom as a possible acceptance of a reality made for man.
The scandal of death and suffering
The sympathy and identification "cum patire" in a meeting between subjects
