Teaching methods

Teaching with different interchanging didactic methods in the same class: presentation of contents ('delivery mode') and interaction with students through several activities in different languages ('interactive mode').

- 7 two-hour lessons taught in delivery and interactive face-to-face mode

Assessment methods

- For attending students, the learning assessment will be carried out continuously through interactive participation in class, which includes written and oral exercises, the production of various types of texts, and the development of a final essay to be agreed upon with the instructor. This approach allows for the evaluation of oral and written expression skills, as well as the appropriate use of the morphosyntactic and lexical elements of the Spanish language.
- For non-attending students, the learning assessment will consist of a written exam, which includes the translation from Italian to Spanish of a text related to the specific language of tourism economics, and the production of a written text in Spanish on a current topic of 400-450 words. The student must demonstrate knowledge of the morphosyntactic and lexical elements of the Spanish language necessary for correct translation and the development of an argumentative text. The use of a dictionary is not allowed.
