Teaching methods

Lectures will be held in presence, unless exceptionally impossible, in which case the lecture will be recorded and made available via e-learning.

The first part of the lectures will take place in lecture mode. After describing the essential theoretical aspects of the various topics covered, the lectures will take place in an interactive mode: concrete cases will be analysed orally (through discussion) and in writing (through work and learning assessments to be carried out during the lecture).

Active participation in the analysis of case studies and application problems is required. The course will be conducted with the use of slides.

It is essential to have an up-to-date criminal code at hand from the start of the lectures.

Assessment methods

Students participating in interactive teaching (debate and written work) may take a written test at the end of the lectures.

If the written test is passed, the mark will be added to the mark obtained in the oral test on the topics excluded from the written test. The final grade will be the average of the two (written+oral).

Students who do not participate in interactive teaching will take an oral test on the entire examination programme.

Not attending students: Oral exam
