Learning objectives

This part of the course on the taxation of transnational reorganizations aims to provide students with a knowledge and understanding of the tax dynamics that influence the mobility and reorganization of corporations and groups between different Countries of the European Union (as well as outside the EU).

Students, after having learned the basic notions of tax residency of entities, permanent establishment vs. subsidiaries and the taxation of cross border business income, will have to become familiar with the particular tax rules provided by European Union law (also implemented by Italy) which govern the mobility of companies within the borders of the Union (both through transfers of seats and through reorganizations) and with the rules applicable to the same non-EU transactions. Fundamental freedoms and anti-abuse rules will also be studied.

From a practical perspective, students, after having taken the course, will be able to solve the technical-legal problems posed by the current tax legislation on the mobility of corporations and cross-border corporate reorganizations. After the degree, students will be able to actively participate in business decisions relating to the restructuring and relocation of corporate groups, with full knowledge of the related tax consequences.
