Learning objectives

The course is oriented towards the following learning objectives:

1. to know the museum as a complex reality and to understand how research in the field of museology contributes to improving the experience of cultural heritage;
2. to be able to identify trends in contemporary Museology and to recognise the different problems determined by elements characterising our time
3. to know the basic tools for studying visitors and audiences;
4. to identify methods of enhancing cultural heritage by evaluating the opportunities generated by the context.

Contents

The course aims to present dynamics for the fruition of cultural heritage, using tools for the analysis of contemporary Museology, identifying policies, trends, good practices and open issues.

Detailed program

The course will deal with the main themes of contemporary museology with the aim of presenting dynamics of fruition and strategies for the enhancement of cultural heritage, with a focus on the Italian and international panorama. The themes addressed are the following:

1. Museum and collections. Narrative tools for the cultural heritage under the test of time. Collecting and conserving collections. The looted cultural heritage;
2. Museums grappling with post-colonial issues, 'dissonant heritage' and 'cultural frictions'. Experiences of heritage reinterpretation;
3. Museums, cultural tourism and sustainability;
4. The museum at the service of society. Inclusion, ethics, equity and social justice;
5. Museums, communities and territory. Networks and alliances for the creation of cultural systems
6. The contribution of museums in designing the tourist image of a place, The politics of the branches of important museums, contentious cases;
7. Museum visitors and audience studies. Practices for audience engagement;
8. Tools for dialogue with the public: staging, direct and indirect media. Museums and digital tools;
9. Museums in the cultural heritage system

Prerequisites

Knowledge of the fundamental elements for the enhancement of cultural heritage

Teaching methods

The lessons address some key issues related to the engagement of cultural heritage, focusing on elements of genesis, context and strategies, then analysing significant national and international case studies.

In complement to the lectures, a number of in-depth seminars with experts will be presented.

Specifically, the teaching is structured in 49 hours as follows:

- 20 lectures of 2 hours conducted in face-to-face delivery mode;
- 1 fieldwork activity (DI) of 9 hours carried out in face-to-face interactive mode, including visits to local museums.

Assessment methods

This is an oral exam. During the exam, students should prove their skills in referencing and in their critical analysis of the themes of the course, using proper terminology and connections with the studied references. The final score considers: the quality of the presentation, the participation to the activities in the class (for non-attending students the agreed assignments), last, but not least, the knowledge of the topics.
