

COURSE SYLLABUS

Sociology

2526-2-E2004P017

Learning area

1: Linguistic and communicative processes and related cultural contexts.

Learning objectives

Knowledge and understanding

- Ability to understand the social phenomena from a sociological perspective.

Applying knowledge and understanding

- Ability to apply sociological concepts and theories in the analysis of everyday life interactions.

Making Judgements

- Ability to understand some of the changes which are taking place in contemporary societies and how actors carry out their ordinary activities.

Communication skills

- Ability to establish an 'object' of investigation and how to argue about its characteristics both through written papers and through the formalised oral language of sociology.

Learning skills

- Encourage students to study social processes from a sociological point of view; introduce them to the themes and theories present in the sociological field in order to their autonomy of investigation and judgment.

Contents

The lectures aim to investigate the taken-for-granted social life; they 'deconstruct' such reality in order to focus on some of the processes by which social life takes place. The Course is organized around five main topics:

1. the interpretation of modern society given by the founding fathers of sociology;
2. some of the most relevant sociological categories and research fields – from stratification to social mobility;
3. socialization;
4. the correlation between everyday life and daily experiences of social reality;
5. the role played by the techno-scientific knowledge in daily life routines: that is, the development of the 'mass knowledge society'.

Detailed program

- Introduction to sociological epistemology: positivism, realism, interpretative sociological understanding.
- Modern society and Sociology.
- Secularization, citizenship, power, and the problem of social order in modern societies.
- Interpretation of modern society worked out by the founding fathers of Sociology (Functionalism, Durkheim, Marx, Weber).
- Very brief overview on contemporary sociological theories: structuralfunctionalism (Parsons, Merton), power and social conflict (Dahrendorf, Collins), the sociology of everyday life (Goffman).
- Some themes of sociological investigation: citizenship, power, stratification, social inequalities, public policies, social mobility.
- Role and function of socialization.
- Socialization and biology.
- Socialization and the common sense culture.
- Socialization and the theories of personality (Behaviourism, Mead, Freud, Piaget).
- Agencies of socialization.
- The life course as a socially constructed reality.
- The investigation of the taken for granted reality of social life and the social construction of everyday life.
- The social 'knowledge' in ordinary life and the structuration of everyday practices.
- Body, time, space: three crucial variables of social life.
- Action, ontological security and social practices.
- Technologies of everyday life, time-space distanciation, indirect relations, and the mass knowledge society.

Prerequisites

No particular prerequisite.

Teaching methods

This Course will be delivered in the first semester.

The Course is held in Italian.

The teaching method used is in terms of lectures: 28 lectures of 2 hours in presence.

At the the begining of the Course, a detailed program of topics discussed in every lecture will be distributed.

The teaching method and topics discussed focus on the development of synthesis skills, thus facilitating the practical application of the theoretical concepts.

Lectures and class discussions aim to show how science can be applied in studying everyday situations.

Students are expected to be able to make use of the various topics approached during the lectures in order to describe and understand daily situations, making use of their own independent judgement.

Assessment methods

Erasmus students: the exam can be taken in Italian or in English; the student can also decide for an English bibliography; in both cases, it is required to arrange a preliminary appointment with the Professor in order to establish the bibliography and the exam method, which is however mostly written.

During the Course, there will be no intermediate evaluations. The exams will take place in normal sessions.

The bibliography is the same for attending and non-attending students.

Written (required); oral (optional).

The written exam includes:

1. a section of multiple choice questions (only one is the correct answer); the correct answer is the most complete and logical one from the point of view of sociological reasoning; the alternatives can be in terms of:
 - 1.1. answers that although correct are however incomplete;
 - 1.2. generic or approximate answers;
 - 1.3. false or unlikely answers;
2. a section with open questions (in terms of very short essays).

About the written part of the exam, the section of the open questions (2) will be evaluated only if the students pass the section of the multiple choice questions (1). Otherwise, the written exam is considered not passed.

One can take the oral examination only after having passed the written one. The oral examination (optional) covers the whole program and the final vote is the average of the written and oral part. The oral examination aims to verify student ability in relation to arguments indicated in the bibliography.

Evaluation criteria for both written and oral examination:

- Appropriate use of technical formal language – scientific formal skills.
- Logical accuracy in the presentation of topics.
- Ability to identify the connections between issues.
- Completeness of the illustration of the topics given the limits of time and available pages (written).
