Short description

The methodology of research in the legal field requires knowledge of the various databases of Italian and European literature, to which access and extraction methods must be known. In addition to the identification of a coherent bibliography, the research methodology concerns jurisprudential sources: administrative, civil, constitutional and European judicial databases are fundamental tools, whose interrogation methods must be learnt. With regard to the extracted sources, it is necessary to illustrate the methods of use. Finally, the sources produced by the national and European regulatory authorities should be presented: as well as all the relevant institutional sites from which other basic research material is drawn.
