Course title

A City on Stage: The Naples of Eduardo De Filippo and Anna Maria Ortese

Not one, but many Naples, which often remain unaware of one another. A city that is easy to recognise but difficult to get to know, as the anthropologist Marino Niola writes.

A recurring metaphor for Naples is that of the city as a stage, where everyone plays a part: a collective performance. In Naples, all the forms of artistic creation that have enlivened it and continue to do so – with remarkable results (theatre, literature, song, cinema, etc.) – have taken and continue to take the city as their subject matter, drawing on the social sphere as a common ground.

This year's course draws parallels between a number of plays by Eduardo De Filippo and a selection of short stories by Anna Maria Ortese, all of which feature Naples as their setting. A comparison between two literary forms – theatre and short fiction – and between two authors who have much in common, although their perspectives on the city and its inhabitants – from the underclass to the lower and middle classes, and the nobility – differ: critical and ironic in Eduardo's work, critical and desolate in Ortese's.

Topics and course structure

Literature has always been a privileged field of inquiry for the observation of anthropological and socio-cultural phenomena. In literary works, the deep tendencies of every civilization formation find expression: values, aspirations, contradictions, conflicts. Moreover, literature plays a major role in individual and collective aesthetic experience: and its nature as an art of speech makes it a particularly fertile ground for the analysis of communicative mechanisms and artistic processes.

The aim of the course is an approach to texts that highlights the educational dimension of literature. This is done through three main ways.

1. On the thematic level, the prominence given to the literary representation of educational processes, such as the Bildungsroman tradition, coming-of-age stories, images of childhood, adolescence, school, family, disability, and educational contexts in general.

2. On the aesthetic level, the enhancement of the idea of literature as a simulation and artistic projection of experience, and thus as an exceptionally copious and varied repertoire of human models, i.e., psychological constellations, paradigms of behavior, anthropological, social and cultural contexts.
3. On the linguistic level, attention to the ways in which subjects (narrators, characters, poetic voices) speak about themselves and others, inner and outer events, private and public affairs, facts and ideas; recognition of the different communicative contexts represented, of the appropriateness and effectiveness of the expressive choices made by the interlocutors, and of the existential and social meaning of the different verbal interactions.

The course covers theoretical-methodological and cultural-historical topics necessary for the in-depth monographs, chosen from year to year, and dedicated to the reading and interpretation of works by one or more authors, including foreign one

The course is co-conducted in Italian.

Objectives

The aim of the teaching is to promote and consolidate the ability to read, understand and elaborate texts and works of art in general. Through the exercise of interpretation, the student will learn to grasp the formal and thematic aspects of the works, the characters of the experiences represented, and their organization; and at the same time to question the related motivations and implications, also in relation to his own personal experience. Moreover, he/she will have the opportunity to delve into major issues that are the subject of the literary works addressed from time to time: whether historical events, psychological nodes, moral problems, relational and communicative situations.

Through the exercise of interpreting literary texts and works of art, students will learn to measure the depth and complexity of the universe of discourse and the underlying dynamics of the work, and thus appreciate the potential of a conscious use of words. By this route they will be able to corroborate both their communication skills and their autonomy of judgment. Conscious and trained reading skills enable them to transform aesthetic experience into a way of extending their own existential experience, enhancing and refining their understanding of discourse, choices, and the point of view of their fellow human beings. Ultimately, literature is a tool that aims to increase the flexibility and pliability of responses (emotional, intellectual, pragmatic) to new situations: and, consequently, to intensify social interaction skills.

With this teaching, through participatory class attendance, the following learning is intended to be promoted:

1. Knowledge and skills:

- Acquire mastery of the complexity of language, the semantic depth of terms, the variety of possible meanings also depending on the context of utterance and the variety of linguistic usages;
- Acquire awareness of the nature and character of literature, and the functions it can play within a cultural and artistic context
- Learn the main factors of literary communication, and the main categories of analysis, including the fundamental principles of rhetoric and stylistics;
- To learn about the sociological and anthropological aspects of literary representation;
- Understand and master expressive, performative and participatory art-based languages in the field of educational professions
- Acquire knowledge regarding models of coordination of services, events, training paths

- Acquire knowledge regarding models of cultural and environmental heritage enhancement

2. Application of knowledge and understanding:

- Enriching one's expressive and communicative skills, increasing the propriety and precision of language;
- Developing awareness of the communicative and expressive properties of language, with particular attention to the semantic depth of words and the orchestration of said and unsaid;
- Developing the ability to interpret the speech of others, appreciating the difference between contexts and circumstances
- Apply knowledge and skills for problem solving in both concrete contexts and unexpected situations, demonstrating an understanding of the relationships between theory and practice
- Design, coordinate responses to needs, using and enhancing the potential of the arts
- Apply acquired knowledge to design, implement and evaluate educational activities in cultural and artistic contexts

3. Autonomy of judgment

- Develop reading skills, cultivating and exercising one's linguistic and textual sensitivity;
- Acquire sufficient familiarity with critical language to compare the interpretation of proposed texts with one's own reading experience
- Develop skills of analysis, synthesis and critical thinking
- Develop original thinking and planning in response to the needs of work contexts
- Promote innovative research based on the synergy between educational and artistic skills

4. Communication skills

- Development of the ability to relate and effectively communicate acquired knowledge to both professional partners in the educational, organizational and artistic-cultural sphere (colleagues, managers, principals, administrators, etc.) and non-professional partners (users, families, widespread society).
- Use of artistic-expressive languages not only as training tools, but also as fundamental means of communication.

5. Learning skills:

- Ability to rework and organize knowledge.
- Ability to use personal methods of autonomous promotion and tools to support one's own professional growth
- Reflective and metacognitive skills to monitor the adequacy of one's knowledge and skills and identify any areas that need further study.

Methodologies

Methods:

The course consists of 19 lessons (18 three-hour lessons and 1 two-hour lesson, totalling 56 hours), and includes equally a part of frontal lectures, so-called didactic delivery, and a part of participatory lectures, (exercises with the support of artistic-literary materials: texts, videos, images, music, etc.), so-called interactive teaching.

During classroom work ample space will be devoted to dialogue, discussion, textual reading and commentary exercises (themes, linguistic and rhetorical aspects, narrative modes, cultural paradigms), individual, or small group exercises to promote the ability to pay attention, observe, read and acquire expressive techniques.

Therefore, each lecture includes deliverable and interactive moments: part of the lecture will be frontal didactics, to introduce content on which to then lead discussions and/or exercises. Some initial lessons on theoretical issues and presentation of authors and works will have a longer time of frontal didactics, always maintaining, in each lesson, a part of participatory reflection on the topics addressed, also with the help of different didactic supports (video, audio, etc.). Lectures on expressive methods and techniques will involve the interactive involvement of students in the form of exercises, discussions and/or small group activities supervised by the lecturer. Teaching activities will take place in-person, and some lectures or parts of lectures, especially of the delivery part, (the equivalent of about three lectures, depending on the situation and class context) will be recorded and made available on the course e-learning page.

Where possible, we will organise talks by external guests from the literary and theatrical worlds or by professionals in the arts and education sectors, as well as visits to museums, events, exhibitions, etc.

Online and offline teaching materials

Materials, resources and tools used in class are available on the course e-learning platform.

The lecturer provides materials to support non-traditional students in their study and preparation for the exam: short recordings (presentation of the syllabus, exam bibliography, method of organising the exam; indications on the oral interview; recapitulations of aspects and salient concepts covered in the lecture); she points out video materials available on the web (interviews with writers, lectures, documentaries, etc.) and websites. The lecturer is available (on request) to organise a distance meeting at the end of the course to recapitulate the topics covered, reiterate some indications for exam preparation, and answer students' questions or doubts.

Attendees and nonattendees are advised to subscribe to the course's e-learning platform to also access in-depth material.

NB: Students are advised NOT to purchase the texts by Eduardo De Filippo listed on the syllabus and to wait for the first lesson (which will be recorded), during which the course will be introduced

For Erasmus students: a good knowledge of Italian (Level B2) is required since the texts in the programme must be read in the original language and the oral interview is held in Italian.

NB: The recorded lectures are primarily intended for non-attending students; in particular, the lectures on the biographical and bibliographical profiles of the two authors are to be regarded as compulsory, in the same way as the texts on the syllabus.

NB: An integral part of the examination bibliography will be a series of texts made available to students on the e-learning teaching platform, in particular poetic texts, critical readings, cover pages, drawings, statements and interviews.

Assessment methods

Type of test: oral interview in Italian language. No intermediate tests are scheduled.

This mode was chosen because it is consistent with the formative objectives of the teaching and suitable for assessing comprehension of the text and the ability to critically rework the topics addressed in the course, mastery of expressive registers, and dialogue skills. In general, it is believed that the chosen mode also benefits in countering a now well attested sociolinguistic phenomenon, namely the loss of competence in oral elocution among the younger generation, also fomented, during the schooling process, by the indiscriminate dissemination of written tests.

Evaluation Criteria:

The interview consists of verifying the level of knowledge, comprehension and reworking of the topics covered during the lectures, of all the items (volumes and essays) in the bibliography and the in-depth materials used in class (for frequent attendees only), as well as the ability to apply the concepts and tools used during the classroom activities and/or learned from the texts in the bibliography.

Students are expected to demonstrate the ability to answer questions in a relevant, clear, correct and argued manner, using critical terminology with ownership. Part of the interview consists of commenting on a passage, theme or aspect of the works on the syllabus, and/or presenting exercises or in-depth studies carried out during the course (for frequent attendees only).

Assessment will be based on the Dublin Descriptors: the level bands are as follows

Low level: Not sufficient

Knowledge and Understanding: The student shows limited and fragmentary knowledge of the texts and topics covered, with misunderstandings of the texts proposed.

Ability to Apply Knowledge: The student is not able to verify on the texts the general considerations on poetics, style, reading effects of the authors examined; he/she is very partially able to synthesise the contents of the texts presented, he/she is not able to contextualise and compare them.

Autonomy of Judgement: lacks critical capacity and autonomy of judgement; depends exclusively on information provided by the teacher or the critical bibliography.

Communication skills: The student has a stunted, approximate, stereotyped oral expression and a poor command of discipline-specific language.

Learning skills: The student has a limited ability to rework knowledge and link it to her own experience as a reader; a poor awareness of the usefulness of literary reading as a device for dislocating the self, as an opening to simulations of realities and experiences other than one's own, in the perspective of a more articulate ductility in the face of different educational situations.

Average level (18-24/30): Sufficient - Good

Knowledge and comprehension: The student shows a general knowledge of the texts and topics addressed, albeit with some gaps, imprecision on specific but not essential aspects, or some misunderstandings in the analysis of the texts.

Ability to Apply Knowledge: The student is able, albeit with some difficulty, to verify on texts the general considerations on poetics, style, reading effects of the authors examined, at the teachers' prompting; she/he is able to summarise the texts presented in a discrete manner, to interpret, contextualise and compare them correctly. She/he can recognise different expressive registers in literary texts.

Autonomy of judgement: She/he shows partial autonomy in formulating critical evaluations, often limited to the reiteration of others' judgements.

Communication skills: She/he has a clear and sufficiently precise expression, a fair command of the specific language of the discipline. Is aware of the need to use different linguistic registers according to communicative situations.

Learning ability: She/he has a discrete ability to rework knowledge and link it to her own experience as a reader; she/he has a partial awareness of the usefulness of literary reading as a device for dislocating the self, as an openness to simulations of realities and experiences other than her own, in the perspective of a more articulate ductility in the face of different educational situations.

High level (25-30/30): Distinguished – Excellent

Knowledge and Understanding: The student shows thorough and solid knowledge of the texts and topics addressed; understands and analyses the proposed texts without uncertainty.

Ability to Apply Knowledge: The student knows how to find in the texts, with confidence and effective personal observations, the general considerations on poetics, style, reading effects of the authors examined; with argumentative effectiveness they know how to analyse, synthesise, interpret, contextualise and compare the texts presented, also making use of interdisciplinary links. She/he know how to recognise the different expressive registers in literary texts, associating them with the situations that are the subject of the literary representation.

Autonomy of Judgement: She/he demonstrates excellent critical ability, autonomy of judgement, originality in the analysis and interpretation of texts.

Communication skills: The student has clear, rigorous, fluent and appropriate expression. Is fully aware of the need to use different linguistic registers according to communicative situations.

Ability to learn: The student shows excellent independent learning skills, is able to effectively rework knowledge and link it to her own experience as a reader; she/he has full awareness of the usefulness of literary reading as a device for dislocation of the self, as an openness to simulations of realities and experiences other than her own, in the perspective of a more articulate ductility in the face of different educational situations.

Students are reminded that

- all the texts on the syllabus must be read and studied in full
- a hard copy or ebook of Scaloja's texts must be presented at the oral interview
- by law, the works of living authors, and up to the 70th year after their death, can only be photocopied in full only to the extent of 15% of the volume or essay.

NB: Students with PUOI must email the document to the lecturer before the examination. In addition to accepting requests certified by the PUOI, the lecturer is available for any clarification on the topics of the lectures by appointment in person or remotely.

NB: Examination interviews will follow the order of registration. On an average day, and subject to other institutional commitments of the lecturer, approximately 15 interviews will be held.

In the event of a large number of candidates, once enrolment has been completed, a timetable with possible continuation days will be communicated to those enrolled. In order to have a reliable timetable, students who decide not to attend the interview are advised to cancel in good time or, once enrolment has closed, to inform the lecturer of their absence.

Office hours

Reception by appointment, by writing to angela.borghesi@unimib.it.

The reception takes place in the lecturer's office, room 4098, floor 4, Agora building (ex U6). It is possible to request a remote reception, which takes place in the lecturer's virtual room:
