Teaching methods

The course consists of 7 two-hour lessons, delivered in an instructional format in the initial phase, which is aimed at engaging students interactively in the subsequent phase.

During the lessons, there is an alternation between:

1. the presentation of content (instructional mode)
   a) of a linguistic nature
   b) related to the culture and lexicon of the specialized language
2. interaction with the students in various language production activities (interactive mode)
   a) following the listening to and/or viewing of multimedia material, with spontaneous exchange on both the linguistic and cultural/specialized content
   b) reworking and interpreting the material, including in groups
   c) oral and/or written production based on the presented elements and materials

The lessons are held in both Italian and French. All activities take place in person. Remote lessons are possible if necessary due to external unforeseen events or upon the students' request.

Assessment methods

The French language exam consists of an oral exam. The exam includes an individual interview, usually structured around a few questions aimed at verifying:
- the student's linguistic knowledge according to the curriculum covered during the semester;
- the student's analytical-interpretative skills and understanding of texts of various kinds. The student must demonstrate that they have understood a text chosen by the instructor from among the passages studied during the year, by answering questions and summarizing it.

Students are requested to bring the texts studied during the course to the exam.

Since this is a pass/fail assessment, the evaluation is not expressed in grades. The overall evaluation of the interview is based on:
a) the student's linguistic competence (comprehension and oral production in French, as well as basic grammatical ability and awareness);
b) the actual knowledge of the materials read and discussed during lessons, related to the lexicon and specialized topics of the course of study.
