SYLLABUS DEL CORSO

Advanced Foundations of Law and Regulations in Privacy and Data Protection

2627-2-F9103Q006

Obiettivi

The main aim is for the students to acquire an in-depth understanding of the course contents, such as the basic features of normative reasoning, the current problems of and approaches to the interaction of law and artificial intelligence, privacy and data protection.
The course moreover aims at making the students acquire the ability to identify the structure of arguments and theories, to present focused objections to arguments and theories, and to rationally defend a point of view, possibly original, in order to communicate it effectively.

Contenuti sintetici

The course aims at introducing and discussing the essential features of legal systems (with a focus on the difference between common and civil law systems), of normative and legal reasoning, some of the main current problems and approaches of law and artificial intelligence, AI safety, and an overview of the interplay between national legal systems and the EU system, with a specific focus on the purposes and functioning of personal data protection law (in particular, G.D.P.R. (EU Regulation 2016/679)) and the EU AI Act (Regulation (EU) 2024/1689).

Programma esteso

The course will deal with the problems of the definition of AI techniques in legal texts, actual and projected uses of AI in the civil and criminal legal domain, the EU AI Act (Regulation (EU) 2024/1689), law-following AI, the control and alignment problems, normative uncertainty and normative risk, the fundamental elements and regulation (national, european and international) of personal data protection law.

The course is composed of two modules:

- AI Law and AI Safety (24 hours)
- Foundations of Law, Regulations of Privacy and Data Protection (24 hours)
