SYLLABUS DEL CORSO

Diritto Privato e Commerciale - 1

2627-2-E3305M009-T1

Learning objectives

The Private and Commercial Law course focuses on the study of the principal institutions of civil and commercial law that have the greatest impact on property and economic matters.

First, the course examines the core principles of private patrimonial law, beginning with the concepts of legal capacity, family law, and succession law, before moving on to obligations, contracts, and legal entities.

The course then proceeds to the study of commercial law, with particular attention to the legal status of entrepreneurs and the law governing business organizations, including partnerships and corporations.

Throughout the course, guest lectures by academics and legal professionals are scheduled. In addition, a supplementary course will be offered alongside the main course.

Contents

The Private and Commercial Law course covers the fundamental principles and concepts of civil and commercial law. It provides an institutional study of private law and business law, examining the legal framework governing individuals, legal entities, and companies.

The syllabus encompasses the entirety of private law through the study of its principal legal institutions, following the systematic structure of the Italian Civil Code, which is the primary source of private law. Accordingly, the course is based predominantly on the study of the Civil Code.

The programme includes the following topics:

Persons

Family Law

Property Rights
Obligations
Contracts
Civil Liability (Tort Law)
The Entrepreneur
The Business Enterprise
Partnerships
Corporations

The study of Private and Commercial Law is based primarily on the Italian Civil Code, supplemented by the Italian Constitution and the principal special statutes governing the relevant legal areas.
