Short description

The course bears on philosophical aspects and problems relevant to current educational research. This year we will focus on two main areas. On the one hand, we will explore and analyse some philosophical models sustaining theories and practices in education; on the other, we will explore some of the most pressing epistemological issues facing empirical research.

the course will comprise the following lectures (see PhD calendar for dates of classes)

Philosophical models for pedagogical research

Epistemological issues in empirical research
(prof. Datteri)
